

MPR takes tower

Minnesota Public Radio is "temporarily" borrowing the KAUR radio tower to have it cleaned at no cost to Augustana.

"You need the tower cleaned. We're willing to do it for you," said MPR representative Valerie Arganbright. "We'll bring it back, we promise."

Augustana administration are supporting the action. President Rand has been consulting with MPR officials in special closed meetings.

"Do students want a completely dirty tower?" said Rand. "Sure, they cleaned up the programming, but it's time to go one step further."

Until the tower is back, students and Sioux Falls residents will have to learn to live without their daily dose of alternative music. The station has been at a loss anyway with the loss of staff member Shaun Marko to the Augustana Rodeo Team (see page 7). Rand has been vague about what date the tower will be returned.

"We place ultimate trust in MPR," Rand said. "What do we have to lose? "
